Wedding Stationery Timeline

When should you get in contact with us?

12 Months before

Congratulations on your recent engagement!

Like booking a venue, stylist or cake vendors, we stationery designers have a limit of bookings we can take each month. We also tend to get booked out in advance, so the quicker you get in touch with us, the better.

We could start with some Save the Dates to let your guests know when to expect the formal invitations. This is also great if you're doing a destination wedding, so that your guests have time to book things like their flights and accommodation.

8-9 Months before

Get your guest list underway. It'll help for when/if you decide to address your invitations or envelopes. We generally find couples take a while to get this ready.

By this point, you should already have your stationery designer locked in (here's hoping it's us)!

6-8 Months before

Let's talk wedding invitations. We'll start the process by discussing things like quantity, style, colours and layout to put together a thorough quote for you.

We like to allow at least 3 weeks for the entire design process but this doesn't include printing. This can take an extra 3-10 business days, so get in quick! You want to make sure there's enough time to distribute your invites and get your RSVP's back in time.

2-3 Months before

Your invites should be out and you should be receiving your RSVPs back by now. Your RSVP date should be no later than 2 months prior to your actual wedding date, to allow for last-minute guest and seating rearrangement changes that you would need to notify your venue about.

By this point, we'll lock in your stationery items for the day and discuss next steps.

4-6 Weeks before

All your on-the-day designs should be locked in and ready to go to print by at least the 3 week mark.

This will allow time for any last-minute changes and for our suppliers to print your items. Be sure to chase up any guests who haven't responded!

We also need to ensure there's enough time to get everything delivered to you or your venue.

1-2 Months after

Congratulations on a successful wedding day! You made it!

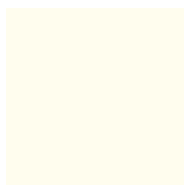

This is generally a good time to send out any Thank You cards to your guests and vendors. No one likes receiving cards too late.
